Villagers turn out in force

There was a huge turnout of Mabe residents at a public meeting in Penryn's Temperance Hall on Tuesday 15th January. A minibus was laid on to take villagers to the meeting in order to object to a 27 house development off Antron Way which could see Trenoweth Quarry, one of Cornwall's last granite quarries, shut down.

30 speakers from Mabe presented their objections to planning officers and Cornwall councillors. Philip Hosken spoke proudly about the quarry which his family had been involved with for several generations.

He said: "I have an idea there is history being made tonight, and I don't mean Brexit. If this development goes ahead and as a result that quarry has to close I suggest one thing. The last gravestone that comes from that quarry should be inscribed with the names of those people responsible for making that decision and where that goes I don't know." Cont. p.2

Cont. from front page "Otherwise the records and pieces of paper will record what happened but it could be forgotten."

"Those names will last a thousand years and when people come to look around this place they will say, 'there was a quarry here but these were the people responsible for allowing this indiscriminate development'."

His speech was welcomed with cheers from the packed hall.

Residents have also said that there is no need for more affordable housing in the village and say the new homes would put more pressure on local infrastructure. They also say that an increase in traffic in the area would be dangerous.

There are also concerns that the development will lead to more applications for more homes being built on neighbouring land.

Councillor Mark Kaczmarek, chairman of the planning committee assured residents that their concerns would be taken into account.

Several employees from the development company attended the meeting but came under fire for not identifying themselves.

Peter Williams, the local Cornwall councillor, was also criticised.

Mabe parish councillor Tessa Kingsley told the meeting: "He hasn't been to the parish council for six months and he wasn't there at the last meeting. He can't know how we feel about this development. He is in no position to represent us at the moment."

Peter Williams, Cornwall Councillor for Mabe, did not attend the meeting

There were strong concerns that if the housing development went ahead there would soon be noise complaints from residents about the work at the quarry.

Many fear that those complaints would lead to the quarry closing, bringing to an end an historic industry in Mabe.

The objectors pleaded with the Cornwall councillors present to listen to their concerns and refuse planning permission.

The planning application is due to go before the committee again on February 11, and an agenda will be published on the council's website on February 7.

Community Carols a hit!

The Annual Community Carol Service held in Mabe Community Hall was enjoyed by many residents on the Sunday before Christmas.

Traditional carols were sung, accompanied by Trisha Barnes on the organ, interspersed with readings by various members of the public - Wendy Mitchell, Isabel Hanson, Katie and Jess Littlejohns, David Charles, Mary Weston, Elizabeth Young, Kathy Tisdale and Jackie Frost.

All were welcomed by Margaret Bryant, who also led prayers, and a short talk was given by Rev. Steve Smith. Thanks were expressed at the end of the service by Chris Cole, Chairman of Mabe Youth and Community Project, who hosted the event. There was a retiring collection for the Penryn and Falmouth Food Bank.

Tea, coffee and mince pies were served by ladies of the entertainments committee, and the Christmas raffle was then drawn by Vice Chairman Kevin Wilkes, assisted by David Charles.

There were many excellent prizes, donated by local firms, including The Lost Gardens of Heligan and Budock Vean Hotel, clubs who use the facilities, and individuals.

Many thanks to all who attended, supported and provided prizes. All proceeds go towards the upkeep of the Community Hall and new, excellent play area.

Mabe Christmas Lights

Christmas seems like a whole year ago (well, it was) but we are still overwhelmed by how many of you turned out in the heavy rain to support The Switch On for Mabe Christmas Lights. A huge thanks to The New Inn for their commitment to the cause which meant we could go ahead with the event.

Jessica, Harry, Kate, Jess, and Evie helped out on the night by bringing the nativity scene to life

There is a huge list of thanks for kind donations and volunteers who helped make the village Christmas Lights a success for 2018; Jane & Dave @ The New Inn, Roger Ford, Steve Nesbit @ Mabe Stores & Post Office, James Edson, Ronnie George & West-country Fruit Sales, Jerry Trevelyan, Liz Dunstan @ Carnsew Farm, Les Baker, Pen-dennis Shipyard, Wilkinsons, Brian Trevelyan, Patricia Sleeman, Sean McGee, Anthony Hocking, Friends in Harmony and Cornwall Music Service Trust.

A huge congratulations to Zak and Melissa Rogers and their children Dylan, Layla and Arlo who won our Christmas Hamper for the Reindeer Hunt. We hope you enjoy all your goodies!

The Rogers family were this year's winners of the Reindeer Hunt, seen here with Karen and Emma from the MCL committee and Jane and Jane, the new landlord of the New Inn (right)

We will be creating a new route for 2019 and maps can be collected from The New Inn or emailed direct.

With over 80 light features now in Mabe and an ever-growing waiting list of adoptees, we are in planning for some bigger/brighter events in the community for 2019 so look out for posters in the pub, shop and around the village.

If you are on Facebook, please search for Mabe Christmas Lights and like our page to stay up to date and do some face-spotting of your friends and neighbours in our event photos.

Finally, a huge thank you to you all for collecting and posting your Green Tokens at ASDA Falmouth. WE WON and Asda are granting us a cheque for £500 towards Christmas 2019. AMAZING!

So, now all the reindeer have gone into hibernation and we are looking to Spring, we look forward to seeing your smiling faces throughout the year.

Luncheon Club Christmas

Members of Mabe Luncheon Club enjoyed a delicious Christmas Dinner in the Community Hall during the week before Christmas. It was prepared by the cook Janet Warren, ably assisted by Peter Moyle and June Tiplady.

The meals were served by special waitresses for the day - Jackie, Annie, Jan, Samantha and Rachelle.

Over fifty residents tucked into the traditional turkey roast with all the trimmings, followed by Christmas pudding and brandy sauce. Tea and coffee was served with mince pies and after eights, and all received a present.

This meal was provided free of charge due to donations from the Parish Council and County Councillor Peter Williams, who also attended the event. He was thanked for the grant, as was the Parish Council, although Chairman Peter Tisdale was unable to attend due to illness. The cook and all helpers were thanked for their hard work, and Janet received a gift for her efforts over the past year.

During the meal the school choir attended to sing carols, which all enjoyed and joined in. The children then had to return to school for their own party.

Meals for any retirees in the parish are available every Tuesday at 12.30 pm, and anyone interested in coming along can ring Margaret Bryant on 373102.

Church raises money for the homeless

Thanks to those who supported the various charitable events this Christmas at Mabe Church.

The Suitcase Singers' Christmas Concert at Mabe Church raised £400 to be shared between St Petroc's and Shelterbox, and the Annual Advent collection at Mabe Church, also for St Petroc's raised £57.75.

Christmas bowls fun

Mabe Short Mat and Carpet Bowls Clubs held their joint Christmas celebrations during the week before Christmas.

Everyone was welcomed with a glass of mulled wine, and there was also a free glass of wine for the meal. The three course meal was cooked and served by Nicola, assisted by Tracey, and consisted of vegetable soup, traditional turkey roast, followed by a selection of sweets. Tea and coffee were then served with mints and all enjoyed the convivial atmosphere.

Chairman Keith Bryant gave a resume of the previous years activities, and presented Barry Swaddling with a runner's up trophy for the singles competition, which was held earlier in the year in memory of Grosvenor Knowles.

There was also a raffle, which covered the cost of the rent of the hall and miscellaneous costs.

The club also held an event on New Year's Eve, consisting of a "roll-up" in the morning, followed by a lunch of soup and a roll followed by a sweet.

Many also participated in another "roll-up" during the afternoon, and there was a raffle for club funds.

The Short Mat Club meets on Monday and Friday afternoons, and Carpet Bowls on Thursday afternoons, all at 2pm. Anyone interested in having a try can come along and meet a friendly group, who are all willing to encourage and help, or ring Keith Bryant on 01326 373102.

Rubbish in street a problem

It has been drawn to the Parish Council's attention that people have been dumping their rubbish on the pavement opposite the shop.

Obviously this is not a great look for Mabe, as well as attracting vermin, so please, could people dispose of their rubbish by either leaving it out on the correct day for the binmen, or taking it to the dump in Lowdowns.

Pub says thanks!

Thank you to all our customers over the festive period and a Happy and Peaceful New Year to everyone.

With regards to the pub car park, can we please ask people to respect that in order for us to be successful we need to keep the car parking for customers, we have had a couple of occasions when customers cannot park due to cars being left all day/night.

DementiaUK coffee morning raises almost £1500

We rose early to a slightly cool, misty Saturday. We were lucky and had been able to set up the hall the evening before, so it was just the direction signs that needed to be put out at 7.30am!

After a quick breakfast we packed up the car with the cakes and pastries - too precious to be left unattended all night!

We thought we had plenty of time to complete preparations, but as usual, time whizzed past as others arrived with yet more goods to sell - homemade Cornish pasties, mince pies, cup cakes, jams, chutneys and biscuits. The raffle table ended up with 27 prizes and I had only put out 4 the night before. The bric a brac table which had looked fairly empty was awash with interesting ceramics, glassware, clothes and books. The 70 plus soft toys were set up on the tombola table and the craft stalls were looking great. We start at ten, but visitors started arriving at twenty to 10 and we were off!

By 12 o'clock we were tiring but we had raised an amazing £1,360. This was later made up to £1,480 by a few extra sales the following week.

As you can tell, the coffee morning was not just the work of one or two people. A big thank you needs to go out to the huge team of helpers and visitors who make it such a success each year.

Return to Cornwall

by Max Campbell

Do you remember reading about Max Campbell's Atlantic adventure, which included being set alight by his stove, in the Apr/May 2017 issue? Here, Max tells the story of his return trip to Cornwall in his own words...

The fire had left me scarred and frightened. It had forced me to leave both my boat and my adventure, and turn my back on sunshine and freedom. I left Flying Cloud at anchor - safe behind a long, spit of mangroves which curved round on itself like the crooked finger of a witch. A year passed before I could muster up the courage to return, but when I did, I let out a sigh of relief as I found my pretty little boat swinging around right where I left her.

My plan was to go home again, but this time, I'd be taking Flying Cloud with me. This meant I'd be crossing the Atlantic again, singlehanded, on a boat that was definitely not designed for crossing oceans. It's always difficult to break the news to my parents, especially my mum, as I can tell it keeps her up at night.

'I'm going to sail Flying Cloud home again', I told her on the phone, as I sat on the step of a rum shack, my feet buried in the warm tropical sand. She sighed, and paused for a moment, before encouraging my decision. I could tell she was torn between supporting me to reach for my dreams and discouraging me from taking another massive risk. It was harder than the first time, as we both knew how close that crossing had brought me to death's door.

Max onboard his 22 foot wooden sloop, 'Flying Cloud'

To get back to the UK from the Caribbean, a northern route across the Atlantic is best. After leaving the Caribbean, it's best to head north, out of the tradewinds and into a region of light winds called the Azores high. Most sailing yachts attempting the passage pile their decks with cans of diesel, and motor for days, often weeks, to pass through this region of calms. For me that was not an option, Flying Cloud was simply too small! I had to depend on the wind to get me there.

The Caribbean faded into the distance behind me as the sun melted into the horizon, drenching everything in a vibrant orange juice. I had enough food and water for 50 days, although my guess was it would take 3-4 weeks. The first week passed painfully slowly. At the start, it's incredibly daunting to plot your position on the chart and see the vast expanse of ocean that still lies ahead of you. Although as time passed, and the number of miles between me and the Caribbean grew, I became more and more contented.

10 days out of the Caribbean, I ghosted into the Azores high. Day after day, I would gaze out upon a completely flat seascape, delicately calm, like the skin of some silky blue snake. Progress was slow, and any breath of wind that moved past me I had to make the most of. It seemed that even the jellyfish were overtaking me.

Gradually I inched my way out of serenity and found enough wind to push my boat along steadily. I celebrated with a Dorado as I passed the halfway point, and relished in living like a sea gypsy again. People always ask me if I ever became lonely, and I can honestly say that never did a slither of loneliness even cross my mind. It's so refreshing to take a step back from the artificial concerns that society imparts on us, and create an existence in the true order of things. Never before had I felt such a deep-set feeling of happiness and satisfaction than when I let my raw, human instincts completely take over. To have the sun and the moon dictate the rhythm of life is such a blessing, and it's almost ironic how hard I had to work in society beforehand to provide myself with the opportunity.

All in all, I spent 47 days alone at sea (33 days between the Caribbean and the Azores and 14 days from the Azores to the Ilse of Scilly). My return to the UK couldn't have been more perfect. As I pulled into The Cove, St Agnes, my whole family were waiting for me on their big blue fishing boat. I stepped straight from my boat to theirs, salty and windswept, to embrace my emotional mother as we both wept tears of joy. We spent the next week in bliss, taking long walks and catching up on lost time, before sailing back to Falmouth to decide what's to come next...

Brownie's Christmas badge is a winner!

In December, Mabe Brownie Ella, aged 10, won a competition to design a Christmas badge (see below).

The competition was open to all Brownies in Cornwall and there were over 2000 entries.

Mabe Brownies used the badge on the front of the Christmas cards which they made for the residents of Antron Manor.

The Public Access Defibrillators which were installed at the shop and the Community Hall last year, cost the Parish Council £160 plus VAT each to maintain and monitor every year. Please can you contribute by donating any small change (or large!) in the tin in the shop? Any contributions are really appreciated.

During the Christmas service at Mabe Church on Thursday 6th December, five girls plus new leader Jill made their Brownie Promise. The girls were Jess, Zanthie, Imogen, Holly and Beth.

Just a thought...

We certainly live in difficult times! As well as being in a period of 'Austerity', with cuts in public spending hitting the poorest the hardest, at the end of March the UK is due to leave the European Union.

The period since the referendum has been one of the most politically divisive and unsettling in our nation's recent history. UK nationals fear for the country's future, EU nationals living here feel scared for their safety, confidence in our political system is at an all-time low and there is talk of the break-up of the United Kingdom.

When faced with situations of challenge we have several alternatives. We can do nothing - just give up in despair; we can choose to vent our frustrations on other people (our opponents, or our leaders, or those we can easily scapegoat); or we can choose to look for ways of working together to overcome the things that challenge or threaten us all.

One way to do this is firstly to get to know one another better, to strengthen the ties with the people around us. To look for the positive things we share in common: our universal need for mutual respect, kindness, encouragement; our need for hope, peace and a shared meaning in life. And all of this regardless of political persuasion, ethnicity, religious belief - and any other differences we may have.

In difficult times, especially with the world in turmoil, and even our own leaders at a loss as to the right course of action to take, it is the strength of character of our local community, our determination to do what is right, our commitment to each other and our sheer love for one another that will see us through.

Appeal to save Mabe Church roof

The roof at St Laudus church is in need of repair and we are looking for help from all quarters please!

The roof slates largely need replacing and the cost looks like being something in excess of £70,000. Needless to say we are going to need the help of the local community.

Over the coming months we'll be advertising various fund-raising events and schemes so watch out for these in Mabe Matters and on the notice boards at church and in Mabe Stores.

Mabe School's Cross Country Championships!

On Thursday 17th January, the school field was transformed into a cross country course, complete with flags, posts, marshals and a finishing funnel. Our hardy little Choughs and Chicks were the first to complete the route, charging on in wellies and enjoying the atmosphere. After our nursery children had 'given it welly,' each year group in turn took to the field, completing a distance which we felt appropriate to their age.

We were very proud of everyone who took part and it made a lovely change to usual afternoon routines! We were certainly very lucky with the weather as the rain held off all afternoon.

I would like to say a massive thank you to Mr Manning who set up the course and showed great enthusiasm throughout the afternoon. Our fabulous team of Herons (Evie, Lily, Tylor, Ella, Chloe and Tilly) were fantastic marshals and were very encouraging to their school mates. They even helped to take the course down, stacking up posts and winding up tape. Roger Murch (Oliver and Jessica's dad) and Mr Short were absolute stars all afternoon and helped the races run smoothly.
